

May-Day Celebrated By Communists of Crows Nest Pass at Blairmore

430 Parade From Bellevue, Blairmore and Coleman. Abuse and Ridicule Freely Showered on All Not in Sympathy With Reds

May-Day saw about 400 men, women and children take part in the demonstration at Blairmore. Less than 100 from Coleman marched, after a brief meeting at the post office corner, where a denunciatory rambling tirade was given by Murphy, Communist organizer, in which all former Union leaders, the operators, the church, the governments and the Coleman Journal were included.

The procession, headed by a placard bearing the words, "Remember Estevan," and embellished with revolvers and red paint to represent blood, and with numerous red banners with various slogans thereon, marched to Blairmore, headed by a small brass band, where addresses were given by the following:

Andrew Dow; Coleman; Jack Price, Bellevue; Frank Leary, Blairmore; E. Ukrainitz, Jim Gardner, Douglas Jones, Coleman; Mrs. J. North, Blairmore; H. Murphy, Calgary. Hillcrest, Corbin, Michel and Coal Creek were not represented in the demonstration. Archie Fraser of Coleman was chairman, and Wm. Peters, chairman of Blairmore strike committee, opened the meeting.

Everyone not allied with the Communist party was soundly and soundly trounced by a vituperative flow of oratory, in which not one helpful suggestion was made to alleviate the problems of the workers. Instead, they were to resort to revolution.

Frank Leary of Blairmore, though roundly condemning the preachers for not being there to speak to the workers, and stating they were not fulfilling their duty, said the Bible was the greatest story ever told, if read from the workers' viewpoint.

A Young Communist League member told the people not to listen to the old men on the street corners, whose bald heads were filled with sawdust. He was followed by one of the old men whose head glinted in the sunlight, who related his experiences of the hunger march of unemployed to Edmonton, where he was invited out to dinner by two unemployed friends who had some extra "banquet" tickets, valued at 12c each. He stated he ate two of the "banquets," and a third would not have overloaded his stomach.

The prize tongue-lashing of the day came from Murphy, whose usual line of ridicule and misrepresentation won the applause of the 400 sympathizers present. Here he again sailed into the operators, past leaders of the labor movement, the police, the local members of the legislature, The Journal, and the rest of "the triple" as he expressed it. This caused great amusement.

Referring to war, he said the Russian soldiers fought the Germans for two years, then when they found the workers were not responsible for the trouble, they went back and cleaned up the Germans. There are lots of cars in this country, but they are not wearing owners. When the next war comes and they ask you to join up, they will give you guns, and you can learn to use them. This was greeted by applause and cheers.

On being told he was lying when he referred to alleged comment in the Coleman Journal, he said he would be willing to debate with any

A Scout troop was organized at Crows Nest on Tuesday by District Commissioner J. W. Gresham, Scoutmaster Rev. A. G. McMorline of Michel, G. E. Hills of Blairmore and Rev. A. S. Partington. At the Greenhill hotel for several weeks Mr. G. Vissac has been showing moving pictures, which have been enjoyed by the Scout troops of the Pass towns and the Girl Guides from Coleman under Mrs. Borden. The next series will be shown on May 17.

Superintendent of Medicine Hat Hospital Died From Pneumonia

Miss Edna N. Auger, superintendent of nurses at the above hospital, passed away on Monday morning. She was a graduate of that hospital and very capably filled the position for a number of years. In addition to her hospital service, she served overseas during the war. Her death will be mourned and she will be held in affectionate remembrance by many of the graduate nurses who passed through their training courses under her supervision, and by a large number who met her in the course of her official and social duties.

J.F.S. in the Cranbrook Courier says: "We have often heard of 'Fiddlers' green,' but never knew where it was located until we attended the musical festival last week. It lies in the Crows Nest Pass somewhere around Blairmore and Hillcrest. Never did we see such a bunch of fiddlers come from a small locality, and all good ones at that. Mentioned this to a man sitting alongside me, and he said: 'Well, you know those fellows are only working half time down there, and I guess they have taken up fiddling to keep from going crazy.'

who stuck up for the present system. But none of them came out to this meeting, not even the local member, the "cheese-monger" who was elected to the legislature," who just drove by in his car and had nothing to say.

If the operators attempted to work the mines, they would find pickets posted, and if necessary more men would be brought in from Calgary to help them. He told them to not to carry arms, or rocks, and to keep their hands in their pockets. They should win over those not in sympathy with them by visiting them in their homes and talking to them.

A woman speaker was Mrs. North of Blairmore, who appealed to women to join the ranks. "We built the railroads; we opened the mines; we made the profits," she said, "yet conditions are getting worse for the workers."

The day passed in an orderly manner, the atmosphere cooling the ardor of the enthusiasts, as a cold east wind prevailed. The meeting closed about 5 p.m., the demonstrators being satisfied they had given the "capitalists and parasites" a thorough tongue-lashing.

Outside Influence Has Caused Bad Split In Ranks of Mine Workers

Trouble is Result of Affiliations With Communist Organization With Harmful Results to Local Unions in Pass Towns

The strike of miners in the Pass is unjustified and regrettable, in that the workers suffer most. For nearly eight years these mines worked under local agreements. In May of last year a vote was taken resulting in affiliation with the Unity League. Many did not know that it was aligned with the Red Internationale, or the results that would follow. Trouble commenced from that time. Former local union officials were dismissed or resigned, the district officials were replaced by Unity League men, and throughout the year 24-hour strikes called not on the initiative of the men, but because of alleged orders from Unity League officials. The right to organize has not been disputed, no wage cut is proposed, and the agreements fully protect the men as well as mine owners against breaches of contract or working regulations.

Events since the miners struck here on March 15 certainly do not show a desire of League officials to come to a peaceful understanding, said a speaker last evening stated even the police could not stop them if they joined together to stop men from going to work. It tends to show that the Red organization is making a determined stand in the Crows Nest Pass to dominate miners, operators and the citizens generally, a policy which would wreck the industrial life of the district, with the inevitable closing of the mines and workers having to hunt other fields of labor.

At a meeting held last evening, Sudworth stated if anyone had a better remedy for improving conditions, he could have the platform. The invitation was fair enough, but was not taken advantage of. If red propaganda is to be combated on principle, in fair discussion. It requires local speakers to arise and tell the workers. It requires preparation, for very few men can intelligently speak on a subject without having given careful thought.

The Unity League has been aggressive and creates an impression on those who look no further than the immediate present. But beyond suggesting revolution as the only way out of present difficulties, it has nothing further to offer.

Many experts in the field of economics who are just as concerned as the workers to solve the biggest problem the modern world has experienced, are perplexed to suggest remedies for the world-wide condition which is bearing so heavily on all classes, and not only the manual workers. To suggest revolution is too much like a man, who, finding his house too small, wrecks it without having the ability or the means to rebuild.

The ulterior motives of the power that work through the Unity League are hazy. Murphy, admittedly an organizer of the Communists, who stated his support comes from Russia, has widened the breach between the two factions, Reds and Moderates; or, as he terms them—"Scabs." It is by coarse personalities flung freely from platform or soap box that hatred and passion is intensified, and it shows weakness on the part of the speaker if he resorts to this method of trying to impress the workers. Eventually they will find there is nothing of real value behind it, no matter how long the Balancing Life's Budget.

With the problem of balancing budgets occupying the minds of all people entrusted with the duties and responsibilities of government whether in the Federal, Provincial or Municipal fields; with the same problem uppermost in the minds of the executives of all our large transportation systems, industrial enterprises and financial institutions; with every business man, big and little, every head of a family on salary or earning wages, even men and women out of employment, all engaged with the same problem, the thought intrudes itself: "Are people, individually and collectively, more concerned with the dollar-and-cent balancing of their material budgets than they are with the much more important balancing of their lives?"

It is important, of course, vitally necessary in fact, that people should balance their material budgets. If they do not, bankruptcy in business and financial disaster lies ahead. No individual, no corporation, no government, no nation, can go on indefinitely spending more money than they receive or have. Monetary budgets must be balanced; trade budgets must be balanced, that is, inasmuch as every import is likewise an export, and every export an import, these must balance, and if every nation insists on developing exports while refusing to receive imports, the world's economic structure is thrown out of balance and bankruptcy leading to disaster and ruin is inevitable.

But it is equally true, and a law of nature that cannot be ignored and dare not be defied without loss and suffering, that the budget of our very lives must be balanced. But inasmuch as disaster may not follow quite so quickly, and the payment of the penalty may be longer deferred, than is true in the financial world, most people neglect to properly balance their lives until it is too late.

In the struggle for material wealth, for success in business, for supremacy in political life, for victory in the field of sport, even to reach the top of the social ladder, what a vast number of people overlook and neglect the all-important asset of maintaining their physical health. Failing to do so, their lives are sady out of balance, for of what avail is the accomplishment of their desires if the price to be paid is impairment in health, bodily vigor and strength undermined? Achievement at such a price is too costly, and is, in fact, not achievement at all, but failure, because one cannot enjoy or long retain that which has seemingly been achieved.

How frequently has it happened that a brilliant student aiming at high marks and scholastic honors through too close application to his or her studies, and the burning of the midnight oil, has so sapped both mental and physical strength that in the crowning hour of learning achieved, and apparently with a life of great promise just beginning, collapse has come.

Others in the race for material things utterly fail to balance the budget of their lives by any intellectual studies or pursuits. They fail to balance their lives with the beauties of nature, or music, or good literature. They even neglect the taking of proper exercise and recreation. As a result of their unbalanced lives they become gross, self-centred, utterly selfish, and largely lost to all the finer things of life.

Man is a dual personality—a combination of body and spirit. If his life's budget is to balance, he must devote attention both to his body and to his spirit, and to the development of mind and spirit. He cannot afford to neglect either the one or the other; neglect of one means not only that it will suffer but the other will also suffer.

The balancing of life's budget calls for an all-round development of body and of spirit, and of the mind which is partly of the body and partly of the spirit. A man may seek at religion, he may profess to have no religion, but in so doing he merely advertises the unbalanced character of his life. He is less than a complete man. A man may be perfect physically, but if he neglects his mind and his spirit, he is merely a high type of animal. On the other hand, one who neglects his body and develops his mental powers to the exclusion of all else, is a freak, and even his mental powers become distorted and unreliable because he lacks the necessary contact with and appreciation of natural human forces.

It is only through a true balancing of life's budget that man can possibly reach his highest destiny of happiness, achievement and usefulness in this world.

The fact that C. B. Cochran is putting on "The Miracle" again in London, England, again recalls a good story. Among those who were queuing up for the advance booking on the occasion of its last presentation were a Scot and a Jew. When it came to the Scot's turn he asked for twelve orchestra seats and paid with a ten-pound note, which fact staggered the Jew. "Come along, sir," said the box-office man impatiently to the Jew, how many seats do you want for "The Miracle"? "None," he replied. "I've just seen it."

Would Train Nurses For Mental Hospital Work

Alberta Psychiatrist Speaks Of Success In Treating Mental Cases

Combined training courses for graduate nurses, which would include as well as general hospital work a considerable amount of mental training, was suggested by Dr. N. Barager, Alberta psychiatrist, as one of the solutions to the present mental health problem at the recent session of the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses Convention.

The mental hospital nurse needs general training plus tact and good judgment to the nth degree, he declared.

Readjustment of the public viewpoint to the mental case, which is gradually taking place, is one of the greatest needs in dealing with the care of such patients, he said. It must be understood the patient is ill, as is the patient in the general hospital.

Dr. Barager spoke of the 25,000 patients in mental hospitals and 6,000 in mentally defective institutions in Canada. "The age-old idea of an insane person entering the hospital, and remaining behind closed doors for the remainder of his life is an untrue picture today. Sixty-one per cent. of the number admitted were discharged last year.

The day is not far distant when criminals will be treated as mentally ill persons and dealt with by psychological measures, the doctor believed.

Plenty Of British Capital

Is Available In Canada For Sound Investment Purposes

Millions of dollars of British investment for the development of enterprise in Canada, when he returns can be shown for bonafide investment projects, Major Gordon C. Home, official of the Empire Development Association, of London, England, stated at Victoria.

"There is plenty of capital in Great Britain, despite the difficult nature of times, looking for ordinary returns through investments in industrial and other undertakings, within the empire. Our great difficulty has been that worthwhile projects in the British dominions have not been drawn as closely to the attention of the motherland as might be desired. One purpose of the Empire Development Association is to secure information of investment opportunities to lay before those having the capital to encourage and develop such undertakings," said Major Home.

Garnet Wheat

Mixture As Much As Seven Per Cent. Allowed In No. 1 Northern

Since 1926 the grain inspection department has permitted as much as seven per cent. of Garnet wheat in No. 1 Northern, James D. Fraser, chief grain inspector, told the House of Commons Committee on Agriculture. That proportion would not affect the grade. In general, however, Garnet had been kept fairly well separated from other varieties.

Mr. Fraser had no opinion to offer as to whether Garnet should or should not be graded separately. In his experience he had never received any complaint against No. 1 Northern on account of Garnet being contained therein.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommendations Daily Use Of Stomachic
Laxative To Overcome Trouble
Caused By Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling and flatulence are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because they cause a toxic condition, the lining of the stomach often leading to ulceration, and the acid itself causing the stomach to become inflamed and sore. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a little Stomachic Laxative and take a spoonful or four tablets in water right after eating. This will drive the gas wind and blast right out of the body, soothe the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no more trouble. Stomachic Laxative (in powder or tablet form) is in fact a natural and harmless to the stomach, inexpensive remedy for the cure of acid indigestion for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

The Flax Seed Industry

Farmers In Canada Are Giving It
Considerable Attention

Flax is a crop which is at present receiving quite a lot of attention by farmers throughout the Dominion. There are two principal uses for the crop, fibre and seed. Varieties giving the best fibre are not so well suited to seed production and, at the present time, the bulk of Canadian production is devoted to flax-seed, which has reached an average of over 3,000,000 bushels annually. Some two and a half million bushel of this volume are used domestically in the manufacture of linseed oil. The varieties which are being specially developed throughout the Dominion at the present time are those which offer greatest value from the standpoint of quality of seed and high percentage of oil content.

The church was one of the many built during the reign of Constantine the Great. Behind the stone was found a mosaic panel depicting in vivid black, red and yellow, a basket, several loaves of bread and two fishes.

Tax Duplication

Premier Brownlee, Of Alberta, De-
plores Double Taxation System

Duplication of income taxes by federal and provincial governments was deplored by Premier John E. Brownlee, of Alberta, addressing the annual meeting of the Winnipeg Board of Trade. He said steps should be taken to revise the constitution of Canada to meet modern requirements and eliminate the duplication of taxation.

Appealing for confidence, clear thinking and sanity in the face of economic depression, Mr. Brownlee urged business men to co-operate with governments and farmers in the solution of the tax problems. The most pressing problem was that of agriculture. Some means must be found of enabling the farmer to overcome the burden of debts accumulated in the last two years.

Another problem was markets. Research this season was needed. There were many untouched markets for western Canadian products. All should be sought out and explored.

The problem of governmental finance was also a serious one, but there could be no thought of inflation or schemes of printing of debts. Mr. Brownlee criticized those who pressed for government economy at all costs. Saving in expenditure could only be pressed a certain distance, and after that it resulted in a curtailment of essential service.

Death Toll Among Deer

Strange Malady Plays Havoc With
Deer In Northern Saskatchewan

Reports that bear evidence of widespread death toll among the deer of Saskatchewan's northland, have been reaching here. Starvation, or some strange malady which has been termed "sleeping sickness" is believed the cause of the animals' deaths.

Travelers from the Jack Pine lands of the Big River country tell of "scores" and "hundreds" of deer lying dead in the woods.

A man was recently instructed by H. E. Hutter, provincial game commissioner, to trace down the reports, telling that on one's day's journey while patrolling south of the Beaver River he came across the bodies of twelve deer. There was no apparent cause of death. The animals looked as if they had just laid down and died.

The lungs and liver of these deer were removed and have been sent to the veterinary pathologist at the University of Saskatchewan, who will examine the organs in an endeavor to determine the cause of death. The report is the first official one to be made, but the belief that the condition is general in the northland, is to be investigated as soon as weather conditions permit travel.

Churchill Development

Preparing Facilities For Both Inward
And Outbound Cargoes

Construction of a freight shed for imports coming into western Canada by the Churchill route will be one of the features of work at the Bay port this year. Tenders for the shed will be let very soon. It is expected. Only about 250 men will be employed at Churchill by the Department of Railways and Canals instead of the 750 that were engaged last year. Dredging will be done by one dredge this summer, instead of the two that worked last year. The dredging programme will be completed this summer and will leave the harbor ready for the next twenty years, according to port authorities.

Construction of the extension to the conveyor system is underway now and will be completed about the middle of the summer. Only a small portion remains to be completed on the dock. Efforts are under way to obtain livestock facilities at Churchill for the summer, and equipment for unloading coal from inbound boats.

Cure For Drug Habit

Treatment Effective If Addict Wants To Be Cured

A treatment which the discoverers believe will cure any drug addict who has no complicating illness and who wants to be cured, was reported to the National Academy of Science, at Washington.

It was presented before the academy's annual meeting by Dr. Wilder M. Bancroft, Dr. R. S. Gutsell and J. H. Rutzler, Jr., of Cornell University.

Bancroft and his co-workers discovered that morphine thickens, or coagulates, the proteins in these cells. This effect persists after the influence of a dose of the drug is passed, causing the craving for another and the gradual formation of the habit.

They found that sodium rhodanate acts as an antidote and thins out the thickened proteins again, doing away with the craving and so ending the habit.

Nude Paraders Cause Trouble In B. C. And 117 Doukhobors Arrested

Thrus, B.C.—With itching powder and short lengths of garden hose as their weapons, a force of 18 British Columbia police battled 200 nude Doukhobors, members of the Sons of Freedom sect, at Thrus, 16 miles from Nelson, early Sunday morning, taking 117 of the demonstrators prisoners. Thirty-three women and 84 men were brought here in trucks from the scene of hostilities and landed in jail.

When the police encountered the milling hordes of nudists, the latter fought back ferociously, turning several streams of water on the officers. Finally the police got the upper hand and herded the subdued men and women into an orchard where they were held until the arrival of trucks to bring them here.

On Saturday, a parade in the nude was held at the same spot and passing motorists were pelted with rocks by the Doukhobors. Police rushed to the scene but all was quiet when they arrived.

One woman was injured in the melee Sunday, and she is in hospital. It is believed she was trampled during the battle.

The arrested paraders will be arraigned here during the week on a charge of parading in the nude. Under an amendment to the criminal code last year, persons guilty of this offence are liable to three years' imprisonment.

Fearing a repetition Sunday of Saturday's demonstration, Inspector Forrest Cruickshank of the British Columbia police stationed his men at Shoreacres, five miles from Thrus. At an early hour Sunday morning he sent a motorcycle officer along the highway. He ran into the nude parade and summoned the officers.

Many of those arrested did not have a stitch of clothing on them. One man resisted the officers to such an extent that it took three of them to get him into an automobile.

Sunday night, the jail was crowded. All demonstrators who came in contact with the itching powder, liberally used by the police, were kept busy scratching and their bodies showed big blotches of red.

It is believed that the majority of those arrested are from Glad, where in the past there have been isolated appearances in the nude. Many are also believed to be Communists, but whether they selected International Labor Day to stage a nude parade of magnitude is not known. There have been no organized parades of late, but from time to time there have been spasmodic appearances of nude Doukhobors at various places at a time when no police were around.

Recently there have been many attempts to bomb and fire Doukhobor school buildings in this part of the country, and tampering with railway tracks. Not far from Thrus some weeks ago the engine and a car of a Canadian Pacific Railway train were derailed, a rail having been removed. A switch at a passing track was shattered by a bomb just after a passenger train had passed, and only a week ago a section of Robson irrigation pipe was wrecked by a bomb.

The Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood Doukhobors have offered a reward for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the outrages.

The Doukhobors who staged the parade are members of the Sons of Freedom sect and the parade was a protest at the eviction of Doukhobors from the colonies of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood. Eviction has been in progress for a week or two, the Sons of Freedom being removed to a settlement at Krastova.

Insurance Legislation
Ottawa, Ont.—Senator Arthur Meighen told the senate he planned to arrange further conferences with the provinces interested in the Dominion's insurance legislation after prorogation. Much of the opposition to the legislation on the part of the provinces had disappeared and he hoped to reach a complete agreement in future conferences. The insurance bills were given third reading.

Federal Government Does Not Contemplate Amending Bank Act

Ottawa, Ont.—The Dominion Government does not contemplate amending the Bank Act and the Finance Act to enable a province to establish a provincial bank and to enable the Minister of Finance to make advances of currency to a province for such purpose upon the security pledge. Premier R. B. Bennett gave this answer in the House of Commons, Thursday, April 28, to J. S. Woodworth (Lab., Winnipeg North Centre), who brought up a resolution passed by the Manitoba legislature two weeks ago containing this proposal.

"First," said Mr. Bennett, "banks and banking under our constitution are solely within the jurisdiction of this parliament, to the exclusion of provincial power; secondly, if the provinces of Manitoba desire to establish a bank it can, under the provisions of the Bank Act, incorporate a bank in the manner described by the Bank Act; and, thirdly, this parliament could not confer power sought except by an amendment to the constitution itself, if by the resolution in question it is intended that we should confer upon a province power which the British North American Act declares belongs exclusively to the Dominion and which the Dominion cannot by mere legislation pass on to the province."

The Prime Minister declared he had received a copy of the resolution, transmitted through official sources. "The answer which I have roughly drafted," he said, "and which will be forwarded, is the answer which I have now given."

Mr. Woodworth asked "whether it would not be possible without any violation of the constitution, that the provinces should be given the same right under the Finance Act that is now possessed by the banks?"

"No, because they are not capable of supplying the security under which that power is exercised," Premier

Bennett answered. "I will give the hon. gentleman a concrete answer. The banks are now over-loaded with the securities of the province to which he refers, and under the provisions of the Finance Act they could only grant the banks a limited amount on the deposit of these securities; and the treasury board has to fix the extent to which the advances could be made from time to time, having regard to the solvency and credit conditions that obtain in the province in question. I think the hon. gentleman will realize that if the power he mentions were exercised, the whole financial structure would be destroyed overnight."

On Speaking Terms

Prime Minister and Leader of the Opposition Have No Personal Differences

Ottawa, Ont.—Mr. King speaks to Mr. Bennett, and Mr. Bennett speaks to Mr. King. Prompted by an editorial in the Ottawa Journal, the two political leaders solemnly assured the House of Commons they were on speaking terms.

"So far as I am concerned," said the Liberal leader, after reading the editorial, "I was not aware that I had ceased to be on speaking terms with the prime minister. It is true that I have not felt free to accept some of the invitations he kindly extended, but beyond that I have not been aware of any personal differences between us."

The prime minister said he was and Mr. King had made this statement. "The last occasion," Mr. Bennett continued, "I had the opportunity of speaking to him (Mr. King), I did not observe anything in his conduct which would indicate that he was unwilling to speak to me. Perhaps I spoke to him first on that occasion, but inasmuch as there have been many acute differences between us in which he said he would not accept any statement made by me, I assume the newspapers concluded that, as a matter of intelligent discrimination, I might decline to make any statement to him."

Expresses Sympathy

Prince Of Wales Is Moved By Plight Of Unemployed

Newcastle, England.—The Prince of Wales expressed sympathy for the workless and made a plea to social workers for voluntary personal assistance to better what he termed "deplorable conditions" during a tour of this distressed industrial district of England.

Moved by the plight of the unemployed, he made a little impromptu speech of sympathy to 300 of the jobless at an unemployment centre at South Shields.

"Let me wish you the best of luck," he said. "My sympathy is with you all. I sincerely hope the employment that used to be here will come back and hard times will not continue very much longer."

The uncheduled speech surprised and pleased the hearers, who acknowledged it with cheers.

Effect Economies

Directors Of C.N.R. Have Worked Hard In This Direction

Ottawa, Ont.—The directors of the Canadian National Railways worked hard in the interests of the system, W. A. Boys, K.C., a member of the C.N.R. board told the House of Commons committee on railways and shipping here. Many economies have been effected, and the personnel of the board had at heart the success of the railways. Mr. Boys cited the report of the sub-committee, of which he was chairman, as indicating the extent to which expenditures had been reduced.

R. H. Pooley, Attorney-General, made the announcement following special efforts to trace those responsible for attempted train wrecking and bombings. In addition to the usual police stationed in the Doukhobor districts, 16 special constables have been sworn in under an intensive system of patrols. Guards have been placed on public buildings.

Premier S. F. Tolmie announced negotiations were being conducted with the federal authorities in connection with protection of public property on the main transportation system of the province.

Place Embargo On Western U. S. Livestock Coming Into Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—Importations into Canada of livestock, vegetables for human consumption, and numerous related products are prohibited under an embargo order placed against the states of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona, by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Friday, April 29.

The embargo order against the four United States districts is effective immediately, and was issued following the receipt of reports telling of an outbreak of foot and mouth disease in California. The order does not apply to fruits, but will operate against the shipment of vegetables, which are usually heavy into the Dominion at this season of the year.

For the nine months of the fiscal year, ended December, 1931, imports of fresh vegetables from the United States were valued at $3,680,609, while total vegetable importations had a value of $4,021,991. Animal and animal products imports were valued at $11,142,891, for the same period. The imports by states are not available, but a large proportion of the annual vegetable importations come from California.

California suffered heavy loss from an outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 1924, when thousands of head of livestock were slaughtered.

The order for the embargo, issued by the department of agriculture, reads:

"The importation or introduction into Canada of cattle, sheep, goats, other ruminants, swine and poultry, or of hay, straw, forage, fodder, or of garden products, including vegetables for human consumption or of manure, millfeed, or other materials for use in the feeding of livestock, or of merchandise packed in hay, straw, or other fodders from the states of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Arizona, in the United States of America, or that have been within the said states, within 60 days immediately preceding their offer for introduction into Canada, is prohibited forthwith."

"This order shall not apply to shipments of cured meats, lard and tallow, nor to bonded shipments consigned in customs sealed cars for transit through Canadian territory, excepting shipments of cattle, sheep, goats, other ruminants, swine, poultry and manure."

Banning Use Of Highways

Government Of Alberta Saved Huge Sum By Protecting Gravelled Roads

Edmonton, Alberta.—The Government of Alberta saved $500,000 through banning the use of certain highways owing to recent heavy snowfalls and rains, said Premier J. E. Brownlee, Wednesday, April 27. Mr. Brownlee was referring to protests of Edmonton transport companies who claimed the ban prevented them from doing business.

If heavy trucks or buses had been allowed on the highways during the excessive snow and rain, the highways would have been seriously damaged and the cost of repair would have been nearly half a million, said Mr. Brownlee.

Jury Was Lenient

Did Not Blame Accused For Killing Pretty Girl

Warren, Ont.—Lips of Warren maidens are so alluring that man can't be blamed for trying to kiss them, a jury of five Warren burghers decided in Judge Edmond Froulx's division court. Papa Honoré Dubens sued neighbor Giroux Orlia for trying to kiss his daughter, Elizabeth, but the jury took a look at Elizabeth and decided that man is weak and Orlia was not to blame.

Though the case was a civil action for $199, the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty."

"Not guilty of what?" demanded Judge Froulx.

"Not guilty of anything," the jury replied.

Drug Addicts In Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—Every effort had been made in Canada to restrict the drug traffic yet it was estimated there were 8,000 addicts in this country. Hon. Arthur Meighen told the Senate.

Difficulties Experienced By Newer Provinces Stressed By Premier

Ottawa, Ont.—The premier of the various provinces were most emphatic in their expressions of opinion at the Dominion-provincial unemployment conference that no good purpose could be served by setting out an amount of money in the bill to deal with unemployment and farm relief. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, and Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, so informed the House of Commons when a resolution on relief after May 1 was before the chamber.

"The provinces have had a very difficult experience, especially the newer provinces," Mr. Bennett said, "with a scattered population and large areas, and they felt that it was undesirable to place in a measure of this kind a sum that might be available for the purposes indicated in the resolution."

A measure predicated upon the general view at the discussion will be drafted and introduced in the Commons shortly, Mr. Bennett said. In the meantime, a resolution has been submitted authorizing the Dominion to enter into agreements for relief with the provinces, and pay whatever sums it may be necessary for the Dominion to expend. Power is also contained in the resolution to make advances to the provinces. Authority to pay sums for special requirements in the national parks, in the drought-stricken areas of Saskatchewan, for assistance in defraying the cost of the sale and distribution of products of the field, farms, river and mine are also set out. Further power of a similar nature is included.

The Dominion will continue to assist in direct relief. The provinces had indicated they could not continue for financial reasons on the construction programme to provide relief works. But, the committee was told, works now under way which could not be abandoned without loss would be continued to completion. No Dominion public works will be completed this year except those authorized in the estimates passed by parliament.

To date, Mr. Gordon declared, $150,000,000 had been spent on public works by way of indirect relief since the fall of 1930. Of the amount the Dominion had contributed $48,000,000; and the provinces and the municipalities slightly over $100,000,000.

By way of "direct" relief, the Dominion in the same period had spent $12,000,000, exclusive of advances made to the Saskatchewan relief commission.

Total loans and advances made to the provinces since the fall of 1930 amounted to $43,418,499.87.

The provinces of western Canada believed, said the Prime Minister, that they would be in a position to meet their ordinary expenditure this year. They hoped to do this by the imposition of taxes and the cutting of expenditure. But, whatever developed, the credit of the Dominion must be sustained by sustaining the credit of the provinces.

In certain provinces, continued the Prime Minister, it was argued that the burden of taxation was now almost intolerable. He illustrated the situation by stating that the income tax was now imposed by three separate institutions—provincial, Dominion and municipal governments. It had been suggested that the income tax field might well be divided, and that the provinces should be left that portion having to do with private incomes, while the Dominion collected from corporations.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Over a thousand miners of the Crows Nest Pass are deprived of work because of the domination of Communist agitators who are determined to keep the men from work and prevent signing of agreements unless they have a say in the conditions. In line with their revolutionary policy, they are striving to force the workers still further into the depth of depression and poverty, rendering them powerless to struggle for their rights. Under a camouflage of "solidarity," paid heelers are hanging onto their jobs while the impoverished miner pays the price.

Unfortunately, many "fall" for the most damnable scheme to wreck trade unionism in the mining camps, under the impression that paid agitators and false prophets will lead them to better things. An avowed agent of Communism brags of having walked beneath the red banner of Moscow's May-Day celebration, and then comes to Canada to promote strife and sedition among those who, left to their own problems, would have settled their labor disputes in an orderly manner, thereby forcing Communist agents to look for other fields to stir-up strife.

A campaign of blackguardly invective against men, each of whose little fingers is worth more than the entire carcass of such trouble fomenters, is the best these hirelings have to offer to solve serious problems, and to warrant them holding jobs at the workers' expense. It is time that men took a tumble as to whom they will follow—men of whose ancestry and record they know practically nothing, or men with whom they have worked and lived among for twenty or twenty-five years in these Crows Nest Pass towns.

And some with a yellow streak in them have joined in the campaign of vilification hurled at this paper for its efforts against Communism and to uphold Canadian laws. This country was not built up by sedition and vicious propaganda, and as the Communists are out to fight everyone who will not submit to the threats they make, we may as well decide that having thrown out the challenge, it will be met in no uncertain manner by the citizens and workers of the Crows Nest Pass where the methods and systems of a foreign country are being promulgated, causing an economic paralysis from their underhand methods of allying the Mine Workers Union with an outlaw organization.

Democratic government or dictatorship is the issue, and there can be no side-stepping or sitting on the fence if men wish for a speedy settlement. They must decide whom they will follow—the paid heelers or the bona-fide union leaders. Intimidation and fear by means of the word "scab" are the weapons by which the Disunity League endeavors to keep men in its ranks. Who are the "scabs"—the men willing to negotiate a settlement on the same lines that have existed for seven years, or those who, not wanting to work themselves, try and force all others to refrain from work? The camouflage is torn away, the foundation of this mushroom organization will decay and the structure will topple about those who are foolish enough to be caught in the ruins.

"Banking, Currency and Credit" was the subject of a speech delivered in the House of Commons by Mr. G. G. Coote, federal member for Macleod. The following extract is not without its humorous side: "Money means the chance to live. I think this fact is well illustrated by a story which appeared about a year ago in the Ottawa Citizen. A man had been held up on the streets of the city by a thug who pointed a revolver at his victim, and said: 'Hand over your money or I will blow out your brains!' The poor victim, without any hesitation, replied: 'Go ahead and blow them out; I can live in Ottawa without brains but I cannot live here without money.' I am sure the majority of the hon. members will agree that his last statement is true and the same applies to any other part of Canada."

The annual clean-up campaign should be joined in by every property holder. It develops civic pride and each by doing his bit can add greatly to the improved appearance of the town. A clean town is a healthy town.

Premier Anderson of Saskatchewan emphasizes the belief that prompt and severe measures must be taken to discipline foreigners who defy the laws of Canada and traditions of its people. He is endeavoring to have a conference with Premier Tolmie of British Columbia in reference to the trouble caused by Doukhobors in the two provinces. Public opinion throughout Canada will back them up in their efforts.

Keep the police out of the Pass, cry the Communists in protest. Maybe its lucky for themselves and others that we have the police up and ready to maintain law and order. By all means keep them here till the trouble is over.

Here and There

Exports of Canadian wheat during the month of March totaled 9,920,634 bushels, of which only 71,288 bushels were routed through United States Atlantic seaboard ports.

Canada's butter exports to the British Isles and other countries totaled 10,660,000 pounds in 1931, as compared with only 1,160,490 pounds in 1930.

Canada's bread and bakery products industry showed production to a value of $73,594,494 during 1930, through 2,938 establishments of which 1,071 are located in Ontario and 868 in Quebec.

March was the year's best month, to date, for pig iron production in Canada, with a total of 17,989 tons, at a rate of 590 tons per day, as compared with 362 tons per day in February and 332 in January.

W. G. Chester, dean of Canadian railroad veterans, has just retired, having served after 25 years in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway and another 25 with the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors.

Excursions run by the Canadian Pacific Railway between various points in Eastern Canada have met with unqualified success. To date, some 17,000 persons have been carried on visits and holidays, over different week-ends, by this means.

The 1931 census shows 728,244 occupied farms in Canada, or 17,154 more than were shown when the count was taken in 1921. Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia are responsible for the increase, with the last-named in the lead.

Navigation opened in Montreal on April 15, with the Canadian Pacific liner Beaverburn the first trans-Atlantic ship in port. Her master Captain E. Landy, a diving and gold-headed man, presented annually by the Harbor Commissioners, for this exploit.

Passenger honors in the trans-Atlantic service also fell to the Canadian Pacific, when the liner Montclair docked on the afternoon of Tuesday, April 19, as the first passenger ship to arrive in Montreal. Thus the C. P. R. claims double honors for the 1932 season.

Liverpool witnessed an unique event on April 4, when 750 British boys and girls disembarked from the Canadian Pacific liner Montclair, after a special cruise in the Mediterranean. A great London daily newspaper has offered prizes for the best essays written on the trip.

Some weird stories have been told of feline sagacity, but the open record would appear to be held by a Siamese cat, which "stowed away" on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, when she left England to go to New York to begin her world cruise last winter. Pusy finally managed to show herself when the ship was half-way through her long trip. The Empress got a rousing welcome in New York when her trip was over, and the misadventured cat at delivered to its owner, in the Southern States. (837)

Belief that economic conditions were gradually improving and that the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa would be one of the big historical events in the development of the Dominion, was expressed by Senator Gideon Robertson, former Minister of Labor, who sailed on S.S. Montclair from Halifax recently. Canada's chief delegate to the 16th annual conference of the International Labor organization at Geneva.

Canada's rapid change from an exporter of raw minerals to an exporter of finished and semi-finished products will be well set forth at an annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy in Montreal on April 6 and 7. A number of important papers will describe the new smelters and refineries that have effected this change.

With five steamers in service between Port McNicoll and the head of the Lakes during the coming season, the Canadian Pacific Railway announces that they will now accept shipments of freight at eastern points destined to points in western Canada, via Port McNicoll, Ont., and their lake and rail route subject to way at Port McNicoll pending the first sailing.

Changes in the management of Maritime Province summer hotels by the Canadian Pacific Railway will shortly become official. Joseph A. Cushman who managed the Lakeside Inn, Yarmouth, N.S., and is at present in charge of the Place Viger Hotel in Montreal, will become manager of the Algonquin Hotel, St. Andrews, N.B., and he will be succeeded in the management of the Lakeside Inn by Jeremiah Daley, Jr., now chief clerk at the Cornwall Inn, Eastville, N.S.

Among deeds of heroism at sea, the rescue of the 27 men of the salvage ship Reindeer by volunteer seamen of the S.S. Montclair recently will rank high. Ably seconded by Captain Rothwell who steered the Montclair to make a lee for the lifeboat, and with very heavy seas running, the men under Second Officer Knuth put the ship "as pretty a piece of work as one could wish to see," was the comment of J. G. Ross, of Moose Jaw former M.P. for that city, who was a passenger and witnessed the rescue from start to finish. (831)

GOOD YEAR PRIZE CONTEST

Here's a profitable way to spend half an hour . . . Glance at that prize list and you'll say "profitable is right."

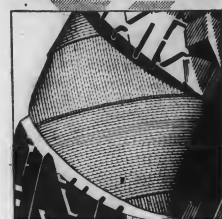

Anyone except tire dealers, employees of tire companies and the families of both can, without a cent of expense, try for one of the prizes.

All you have to do is to examine the six tires of various sizes, types and ply-thicknesses on display here. Figure out how many cords you think would be in each; then add the six figures and divide by six to find the average. Use the section of tire cord fabric also on display to help you.

Submit your estimate on a standard entry blank. There is nothing to buy, no other special requirement, no cost to you.

Closing date: June 5th, 1932. Address: "The Goodyear Supertwist Cord Contest," New Toronto, Toronto 14, Ontario.

PAYABLE ON DEMAND

Local Retailers Is It Fair?

Their representatives tell you of the large sums of money being spent in metropolitan daily newspapers and in nationally circulated magazines like "MacLean's," "Chatelaine," "Canadian Home Journal," "Canadian" and others, to create and maintain consumer demand, and they try hard to persuade you that such "remote" advertising will surely create and sustain large local demand.

It is admitted that it is advantageous to you and your customers for you to stock nationally-advertised products but such products will sell faster if they are LOCALLY advertised, in this newspaper, in addition to being advertised in non-local publications.

There is no good or sound reason why a national advertiser should NOT do local advertising, in this newspaper. You will be told, when you say to the representative of firms canvassing you to stock and push his firm's product, "Oh, we could never afford to do local advertising." What he really means, when he says such words, is that he doesn't expect large local sales. If he did, then he would see that these local sales CAN provide a sum of money adequate to maintain a LOCAL advertising campaign.

Why should you help a national advertiser to develop HIS business in the territory covered by the circulation of this newspaper without advertising co-operation from him?

You provide local distribution facilities for manufacturers of branded products, and your value to them is recognized. Why, then, should these manufacturers not assist you to sell these goods, if stocked by you, by a series of local advertisements, perhaps carrying your name as local distributor, published in this newspaper?

The more frequently and vigorously you present your point of view to national advertisers, direct and through the representative who calls on you, the more surely will you persuade them to accept it.

(N.B. Cut out this advertisement. Paste it on a card and then show it to representatives who urge you to stock goods not being locally advertised.)

King George Refused Stamps For Collection

Royal Family Does Not Accept Gifts From Public

American admirers of George V. and his stamp collection, who have been sending His Majesty specimens of American stamps, are advised through the Associated Press that he does not accept gifts of stamps. The Royal Family of Great Britain makes a practice of not accepting gifts from the public at home or abroad. What is more, with respect to proffered gifts of American stamps, George V.'s world famous collection includes only stamps of the British Empire. This explanation is timely. An American sent His Majesty specimens of a recent issue of commemorative stamps from this country and was peeved because they were not accepted. The story got into the newspapers and tended to convey the wholly erroneous idea that King George was unappreciative of the compliment paid him by the offer of the stamps. A statement of the Royal Family's practice in accepting stamps should be sufficient to remove any such misunderstanding.—Detroit Free Press.

Bay Line Rates Fixed

Fleetistic Mileage Plan Used As Basis For Charges

The Hudson Bay railway freight tariff, long awaited by western interests, went into effect Tuesday, April 26. The tariff is on the Fort William basis and bases the freight rate on a fictitious mileage, 130 miles less than the actual distance of the haul. This schedule has been objected to by the Saskatchewan traffic committee on the grounds that points in the western provinces will not receive the same proportionate reduction from the flat rate as those nearer to the port.

The traffic council, suggested by the provincial government some time ago, addressed a resolution to the Dominion Government and the Canadian National Railways asking that the distributing town tariff rates be applied at a rate equivalent to 85 per cent. of the prairie mileage rate. This reduced rate is at the present time in effect from distributing centres on the prairies.

Tip For Farmers

A farmer was delivering vegetables to an asylum, when a patient accosted him. "You're a farmer, ain't you?" he asked. The farmer allowed that he was. "I used to be a farmer once," said the inmate. "Yes. Did you ever try bein' crazy?" The farmer never had, and started to move on. "Well, you should try it," was the ex-farmer's parting shot. "It beats farmin' hollow."

ESAU SELLS HIS BIRTHRIGHT

Golden Text: "Every man that stiveth in the games exerciseth self-culture in all things."—1 Corinthians 9, 25.
Lesson: Genesis 25:27-34.
Devotional Reading: Hebrews 12, 14-17.

Explanations and Comments

Isaac's Sons Contrasted, verses 27, 28.—Esau and Jacob, twin sons of Isaac and Rebekah, were wholly different in appearance and character. Esau, the first-born, was rough and hairy; he loved the outdoor life, and was a skilful hunter. He was the favorite of his father, who, as is often the case, preferred the son who was so unlike him in every way. Jacob was smooth-faced and handsome, a quiet stay-at-home, and he was the favorite of his mother. From these statements of parental favoritism any one could foretell future trouble. Jacob's Craftiness, verses 29-31.—One day Jacob boiled some pottage, a dish made of lentils or small beans and is to this day much liked in Syria; and when Esau came in from the field weary and that, he asked Jacob for it. Notice that the word "pottage" in Esau's request is in smaller screen underneath that it was supplied from the context and is lacking in the Hebrew. Literally, the translation is "Feed me with the red," and it strikingly shows Esau's hunger and impatient eagerness for the savory dish. Therefore was his name called Edom, as he told, Edom means "Red." Esau had red hair and complexion, and it was red pottage for which he sold his birthright: all these things combined to give him this name. He is the reputed ancestor of the Edomites. "Sell me first thy birthright," was Jacob's answer to Esau. By the birthright he meant the rights and privileges of the firstborn which later, at least, included succession to the father as head of the family, who exercised a kind of priesthood, and a double portion of the father's property. The father's blessing was given to the firstborn son. It included the covenant blessing first given to Abraham—the promise of a great posterity; the inheritance of the land of Canaan, and the special blessing of Jehovah. It was sharp because that Jacob drove, taking a mean advantage of Esau in his exhaustion and hunger, but he appreciated the value of the birthright as Esau could not, for Esau cared only for the gratification of the present moment. Enjoy the present and let the future take care of itself, was his rule of life.

"Amid all the craft and subtlety of Jacob's nature, there was immense capacity for religious fervor and religious faith. He could draw aside the veil of the unseen, and weigh its promises, and compare its treasures with the shadows of earth. He could dream a mystic ladder over the abyss of space, linking all worlds. And while Esau was occupied with pleasure, Jacob could feel within him the strange stirrings of a nature which could not be satisfied with anything within the narrow limits of his tents; but which yearned for that spiritual heritage which was summed in the word 'birthright.'"—P. B. Meyer. Esau's folly, verses 32-34.—"I am dire to death," is an expression we direct hear and Esau gave utterance to the same feeling with the same amount of meaning: "Behold, I am about to die," he exclaimed, "and what profit shall the birthright do to me?" What did he care about something of use only in the distant future? All he cared for now was the satisfying of his present hunger.

"We barter life for pottage! sell true bliss For wealth, or power, for pleasure or renown! Thus, Esau-like, our Father's blessing miss, Then wash with fruitless tears our faded crown."—(Kebble).

The Fanning Mill

Valuable Information Regarding Its Use and Operation

(By H. G. L. Strange)

Seed drill surveys that have been made by the Dominion Seed Branch show without a doubt that a vast amount of weed seeds and other impurities are seeded into the ground each year with seed grain. Investigation further shows that most of this grain had been cleaned through fanning mills. The reason for these impurities being present in the seed is unquestionably due to the fact that it is very difficult to clean grain properly with the average fanning mill. Based on the experience of many years of cleaning Registered Seed to the high standard of perfection required by the Seeds Act, the writer has worked out a method of cleaning seed with a simple fanning mill that can be found to be simple and effective.

In the first place only two screens are really needed for a fanning mill—a top screen that will scalp off large grains, pieces of straw and parts of unthreshed heads, and a smaller screen underneath that will allow the weed seeds, small cracked grains, etc., to pass through, leaving on top of the bottom screen only the large plump kernels required for seed. A fanning mill, using two good screens as described, will do as good work as will those fitted with banks of screens—perhaps better. Some of the large kernels, however, will be light, so that a strong air blast is necessary to blow them out. The mill should be turned at such a speed that will produce such a blast of air as will blow over at least 10 per cent. of the grain, then it is certain that all light kernels are being separated.

If a fanning mill would continue to operate in this manner no weed seeds or other impurities would be present in the first cleaned seed. Unfortunately the average fanning mill will not continue to work in this fashion for more than a few moments, the reason being that the screen, both top and bottom, particularly the bottom screen, very quickly plug up with small kernels and so allow the weed seeds and impurities to pass over with the good grain.

Some fanning mills are fitted with devices that keep the screen clean, tapping hammers or traveling brushes. These devices, however, are very expensive and very few can afford them. A fanning mill without these extras can be made to do good work providing the operator will stop the machine at least every five minutes, remove the screens and carefully clean them with a stiff brush. If this is not done it is quite certain that most of the work of fanning grain will be wasted and that the seed will contain many weeds and other impurities.

Besides cleaning the screens, frequently it is, of course, necessary to see that the grain is fed very slowly and evenly on to the screens and that the machine is also turned evenly, but fast enough to produce, as mentioned above, a strong blast of air.

All grain should be put at least through the fanning mill in this manner, feeding slowly each time. It is the writer's experience that the capacity of most fanning mills is estimated by the manufacturers on a basis of grain cleaning for market rather than for seed cleaning. Most machines, for instance, that are listed at 25 bushels an hour, will do a good job on seed at about eight bushels an hour, and if more is forced through it is at the expense of good work. The machine of course must be set level and should be spliced or fastened solidly to a good stout floor and facilities should be provided to see that there is no chance scalplings or screenings from either the screens or the wind becoming mixed with the good cleaned seed.

Fanning mills with screens only separate according to the difference in width of kernel. To separate kernels of different lengths, that is to say, wheat from oats, etc., it is necessary to use what is called an indentation machine such as a Carter Disc or an indent cylinder. The most perfect job of seed cleaning is offered by travelling or stationary plants in which the grain is first passed through a good fanning mill with a strong blast of air, then through either an indent cylinder or a Carter Disc. The average fanning mill, using screens alone will not separate wheat from oats or vice versa.

Salada Reduces Tea Prices

Salada Tea Company Makes Important Announcement

An announcement of a price reduction has just been made by Salada Tea Company of Canada, Limited, amounting to 10 cents a pound. Mr. A. M. Wilson, manager of the Company, who has been in Winnipeg for the past few days conferring with Mr. R. M. Gibson of Messrs. Gibson, Paterson, Limited, the Company's western representatives, has this announcement to make on the new prices announced by his Company.

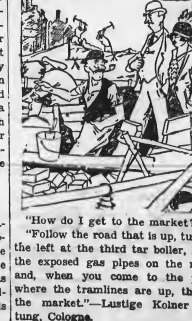

"Teas are cheaper in the primary markets in London, England; Colombo, Ceylon, and Calcutta, India, although best quality teas have not declined in price to nearly the same extent as the lower grades. Nevertheless, the Salada Company, while rigidly maintaining the quality of its product, has reduced prices twice within the last two years, so that today the consumer is paying 25 per cent. less for this well-known product than he did in 1930. The price reduction had been contemplated for several weeks, but was postponed until after the announcement of the Dominion budget proposals in the House of Commons. Tea merchants expected a further tax on tea, but, as there was no additional import announced, they were able to make a downward revision of 10 cents on the pound, or 5 cents on the half-pound."

Device Would Be Welcomed

Maintains Even Temperature and Eliminates Dust On Trains

The Chesapeake and Ohio railroad recently announced inauguration of a new fast passenger train, the George Washington, on which every coach and pullman will be fitted with an elaborate air conditioning apparatus. Even temperatures will be maintained constantly, dust will be eliminated, and the passengers will be kept comfortably cool in summer.

Such devices will become common equipment on all crack passenger trains in due time seems probable. That they will, in addition, come into general use in homes and apartments is also probable.

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

—BY—

MARGARET FEDLER

"The Splendid Folly," Or "The Hermit of Far East," by Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

"The skunk!" muttered Nick wrathfully.

"What's that?" Claire drew suddenly closer to him, her face blanching. A sound—the light crunching of gravel beneath a footstep—had come to her strained ears. "Nick! Did you hear?" she breathed.

A look of keen anxiety overspread his face. For himself, he did not care; Adrian Latimer could not hurt him. But Claire—his "golden narcissus"—what might he not inflict on her as punishment if he discovered them together?

The next moment it was all he could do to repress a shout of relief. The steps had quickened, rounded the corner of the alley, and revealed—Jean.

"We're mighty glad to see you," remarked Nick, as she joined them. "We thought you were the devil himself"—with a grin.

"Oh, he's safe for half an hour yet," Jean reassured them. "I asked Tucker—the Latimer's butler, who worshipped the ground Claire walked on, and his solicitor is still with him. Otherwise I wouldn't have risked looking for you"—smiling. "I knew Nick was over here, and Sir Adrian might have followed me."

"You're sure he hasn't?" asked Claire anxiously. "He is so cunning—so stealthy."

"Even if he had, you're doing nothing wrong," maintained Jean stoutly. "Everything I do is wrong—in his eyes," returned Claire bitterly.

"That's what makes the misery of it. If I were really wicked, really unfaithful, I should feel I deserved anything I got. But it's enough if I'm just happy for a few minutes with a friend for him to want to punish me, to—suspect me of any crime. I should like to see him happy, any longer!"

She flung out her arms in a piteous gesture of abandonment. There was something infinitely touching and forlorn about her as she stood there, though appealing against the hideous injustice of it all, and with a little cry Jean caught her outstretched hands and drew her into her embrace, folding her closely in her warm young arms.

His face had turned ashen abruptly, his face rather white, his mouth working. His powerlessness to help the woman he loved had maddened him.

Meanwhile Jean was crouching little, inarticulate, caressing sounds above Claire's bowed head, until at last the latter raised a rather white face from her shoulder and smiled the small, plucky smile with which she usually managed to confront outrageous fortune.

"Thank you so much," she said with a glint of humor in her tones. "You've been dear, both of you. It's awfully nice to let you go, sometimes. But I'm quite all right again, now."

"Then, if you are," replied Jean cheerfully, "perhaps you can bear up against the shock of too much joy. We want you to have 'a day out'."

"A day out?" repeated Claire. "What do you mean?"

"I mean we're organizing a picnic to Dartmoor, and we want to fix it so that you can come too. Didn't you tell me that Sir Adrian was going to be away one day this week? Go away, and not returning till the next day?"

Claire nodded, her eyes dancing with excitement.

"Yes—oh, yes! He has to go up to London on business the day we'll choose. Heaven send it be fine!"—placidity.

"Oh, how I'd love it!" exclaimed Claire. "I haven't been on the Moor for such a long time."

"And I've never been there at all," supplemented Jean.

"What's Nick?" Claire turned to him excitedly. "Did you know of this plan? And why didn't you tell me about it before?"

He looked at her, a slow smile curving his lips.

"Why, I never thought of it," he admitted. "You see—explanatorily—when I'm with you, I can't think of anything else."

"Nick, I won't have you making barefaced love to a married woman under my very nose," protested Jean equably. And the shadow of tragedy that had lowered above them a few minutes earlier broke into a spray of cheery fun and banter.

"You seem very gay today," said the cold, sneering tones fell suddenly across the gay exchange of jokes and laughter that, ensued, and the trio looked up to see the tall, lean, black-clad figure of Sir Adrian standing at the end of the path, awaiting their approach.

To Jean, as to Claire, occurred the analogy of a malevolent spider on the watch. Even the man's physical appearance seemed in some way to convey an unpleasant suggestion of resemblance—his long, thin, sharply-jointed arms and legs, his putty-colored face, a livid mask lit only by a pair of snapping, venomous black eyes, half hidden between pinched lids that were hardly more than hanging folds of wrinkled skin, his long-lipped, predatory mouth with its slow, malicious smile. Jean repressed a little shudder of disgust as she responded to his sneering comment.

"We are—quite gay," Sir Adrian. It's a fine day, for one thing, and the sun's shining, and we're young. What more do we want?"

"What more, indeed? Except!"—bowing mockingly—"the beauty with which a good Providence has already endowed you. You are a lucky woman, Miss Peterson; your cup is full. My wife is not, perhaps"—regarding her appraisingly—"quite so beneficently dowered by Providence, so it

He paused, and as the black, pinpoint eyes beneath the shabby lids detected the slight stiffening of Claire's slender figure, his long, thin lips widened into a sardonic smile.

"Yes, to the brim," he repeated with satisfaction. "That's a husband's duty, isn't it, Mr. Brennan?"—addressing Nick with startling suddenness.

"You should know better than I, Sir Adrian," retorted Nick, "seeing that you have experience of matrimony, while I have none."

"But you have hopes—aspirations, isn't it?" pursued Latimer suavely. There was an undercurrent of disagreeable suggestion in his tones.

Nick was acutely conscious that his keenest aspiration at the moment was to knock the creature down and jump on him.

"What must find you a wife, eh, Claire?" Eh, Miss Peterson? said Sir Adrian, rubbing the palm of one bony hand slowly up and down over the back of the other. "I'm sure, Claire, you would like to see so—intimately—a friend as Mr. Brennan happily married, wouldn't you?"

"I should like to see him happy," answered Claire with tight lips.

"Just so—just so," agreed her husband in a queer cackling tone as though inwardly amused. "Well, get him a wife, my dear. You are such friends that you should know precisely the type of woman which appeals to him."

He nodded and turned to go, gliding away with an odd shuffling gait, and muttering to himself as he went: "Precisely the type—precisely."

As he disappeared from view down one of the branching paths of the shrubbery, an odious little laugh, half chuckle, half sigger, came to the ears of the three listeners.

Claire's face set itself in lines that made her look years older than her age.

"You'd better go," she whispered unevenly. "We shan't be able to talk any more now that he knows you are here. He'll be hovering round—somewhere."

Jean nodded.

"Yes, we'd better be going. Come along, Nick. And let us know, Claire, as soon as you have found out for certain what day he goes away. You can telephone down to us, can't you?"

"Yes, I'll ring up when he's out of the house some time," she answered. "Or send a message. Anyway, I'll manage to let you know somehow. Oh!"—stretching out her arms ecstatically—"imagine a day of utter freedom! A whole day!"

"No repairs in 22 years," says home owner

"Visitors are delighted with the noiseless operation of my doors," says a home owner of Monmouth, West Virginia. "The locks and hinges have been in use for 22 years, and during this time I haven't spent a cent for repairs. I've never used anything but One Oil."

Many housewives who pride themselves on the spotless appearance of their homes are careless about the lubrication of hinges and locks. Try a few drops of 3-in-One Oil today and see how quickly it brings out rust, dirt and squeaks. For 3-in-One, a blend of animal, mineral and vegetable oils, is distinctly different from ordinary oil; it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

For 25 years 3-in-One has been recognized as the best oil for sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, hinges and general household lubrication. Islet on 3-in-One Oil. At good stores everywhere. For your protection look for the trade mark 3-in-One, printed in Red on every package.

"Oh, how utterly perfect this is!" sighed Jean.

She was lying at full length on the springy turf, her chin cupped in her hands, her elbows denting little cosy hollows of darkness in the close mesh of green moss.

Tormarin was equally prone, was beside her, his eyes absorbing, not the open vista of rolling moor, hummocked with jagged tons of brown-grey stone, but the sun as it rioted through a glory of red-brown hair and touched changeable gleams of gold into topaz eyes.

There was a queer little thrill in Jean's voice, the low note of almost passionate delight which sheer beauty never failed to draw from her.

It was the charm of memory, and Tormarin's thoughts leaped back suddenly to that day they had spent together in the mountains, when, as they emerged from the pinewoods' gloom to the revelation of the great white-pinnacled Alps, she had turned to him with the rapt cry: "It's so beautiful that it makes one's heart ache!"

"Do you remember—" he began involuntarily, then checked himself. "M-m—" he queried. The little interrogative murmur was tantalizing in its soft note of intimacy.

The Jean of the last few days—the days immediately following their quarrel—had temporarily vanished. The beauty of the Moor had taken hold of her, and all the mockery and bitterness which she had latterly reserved for Tormarin's benefit was absent from her manner. She was just her natural sweet and wholesome self.

"M-m? Do I remember—what?" "It was thinking what a pagan little beauty-lover you are! You worshipped the Alps. Now you are worshipping Dartmoor."

She nodded.

"I don't see why you should call it 'pagan,' though. I think you are a pagan Christian. I should say we were meant to love beauty. Otherwise there wouldn't have been such a lot of it about. God didn't put it around just by accident."

"Quite probably you're right," agreed Blaise. "Which case you must be," he smiled—"an excellent Christian."

"Positively I believe they're talking theology!"

Claire's voice, girlishly gay and free from the nervous restraint which she usually showed in the presence of youth, broke suddenly on their ears, as she and Nick, rounding the corner of a big granite boulder, discovered the two recumbent forms.

"You disgustingly lazy people!" she pursued indignantly. "Everybody's napping wilyly and to get unpacking the lunch baskets, while you two are just lounging here in blissful idleness!"

"It's chronic with me," murmured Tormarin lazily. "Any way, Claire, neither you nor Nick appear to be precisely overtaxing yourselves bearing nectar and ambrosia."

"I carried some of the drinks up this confounded hill," submitted Nick. "And damned heavy they were, too. I can't think—plainly—why people should be so thirsty at a picnic. I'm sure Blaise has shoved in enough liquid refreshment to float a ship."

"Praise be!" interpolated Blaise plausibly.

"Oh, we've done our share," supplemented Claire. "And now we're going to the gipsy who lives here to have our fortunes told."

"Before lunch," subjoined Nick. "So that in case they're depressingly bad you can stay up with flags afterwards."

"I can say suddenly, her face alight with interest.

"Do you mean that there is a real gipsy who tells real fortunes?" she demanded.

"Yes—quite real. She's supposed to be extraordinarily good," replied Nick. "She has a lot of property, too, since she has acquired a few square yards of the Moor from the Duchy and built herself a little shanty there. She rejoices in the name of Keturah Stanley."

"I should like to have my fortune told," murmured Jean meditatively. "I'll take you," volunteered Blaise. There was a suddenly alert look in his face, as though he, too, would like to hear Jean's fortune told.

"We'll all go, then," said Claire. "You must let Keturah tell yours as well, Blaise."

He shook his head.

"Thanks, no," he answered briefly. "I know my fortune quite as well as I have any wish to."

She hid her head as they approached, revealing an immensely old, delicately-featured face, which which might have been carved out of yellow ivory. It was a network of wrinkles, colourless save for the piercing black eyes that sparkled beneath fine-arched black brows, while the fine-cut nostrils and beautifully moulded mouth spoke unmistakably of race—the old untainted blood which in some gipsy families has run clear, unminged and undiluted, through countless generations.

There was an odd dignity about the shrunken, still upright figure as she rose from her seat—the freedom of one whose neck has never bowed to the yoke of established custom, whose kingdom is the sun and sea and earth and air as God gave them to Adam—and when the visitors had explained their errand, and she proceeded to answer them in the soft, sturred accents of the Devon dialect, the intricate speech seemed to convey a strange sense of undress.

Claire and Nick were the first to dare the oracle. The old woman beckoned to them to follow her into the cottage, while Tormarin and Jean waited outside, and when they emerged once more, both were laughing, their faces eager and half excited like the faces of children promised some indefinite treat.

"She's given you luck, then?" asked Jean, smiling in sympathy.

The gipsy interposed quickly.

"Tenn! for me to give you take away the luck. But I know that, young lady's so mortal feared of the sun's shinin' butvil. I tell 'ee, me dear!"—nodding encouragingly to Claire, while her keen old eyes narrowed to mere pin-points of light—"you'll see it, yourself—and afore another year's crep' by. 'Eas, say! You'll know then as I telled 'ee t'rew."

Then, with a sudden gesture that summoned Jean to follow her, she disappeared, more into the interior of the hut.

Jean hesitated nervously in the doorway. For a moment she was conscious of an acute feeling of distaste for the impending interview—a dread of what this woman, whose eyes seemed to see only live things in her old face, might have to tell her.

"Come with me," she appealed to Blaise. And he nodded and followed her across the threshold.

The scent of a peat fire came warm and fragrant to her nostrils as she stepped out of the sunlight into the comparative dusk of the little shanty, mingling curiously with an aroma of sawdust which issued from a black pot hung above the fire, bubbling and chucking as it simmered.

The gipsy, as though by force of habit, gave a stir to its contents and then, settling herself on a three-legged stool, she took Jean's hand in her wrinkled, claw-like fingers and peered at its palm in silence.

"Your way baits so plain to see as 'otter young lady's," she muttered at last, in an odd, sing-song tone. "There's life an' death an' fire an' flame afore ye see the sun shinin' clear. . . . And if so be ye take the wrong turnin', you'll never see it. And there'll be no posies to guide 'ee. 'Ees your arm and must tell 'ee how to walk through the darkness. For there's darkness comin'! . . . black darkness."

Violent Scuffles at Bellevue This Morning

Two Women and Two Men Arrested, Making Five in Two Days—Women Prominent in Disorders

The pickets at Bellevue mine this morning were inclined to be violent, and two men and two women were arrested for interfering with men going to work under police protection and resisting arrest. Mounted and foot police had to use considerable force to make the arrest, as strikers endeavored to prevent them, and numerous scuffles took place.

Batons were used in some instances, and some minor injuries were suffered from rocks being thrown by men and women. One miner, named Shewels, set out alone to go to work and was set upon by the mob, being mauled, and three other workers were roughly handled but under police protection got through to the wash house.

Trucks conveyed a number of miners under police escort, and as they passed into the mine property, cries of derision and blasphemy, and violent language was hurled at them. Rocks also were flying at the trucks. The police kept the mob well in hand, under very trying conditions.

The women are the worst offenders, their language being most violent, and their special object of derision is the police, whom they taunt unmercifully. Girls of 16 to 18 years were heard using the most disgusting language.

It is expected this daily strafing will continue, morning and afternoon, for some days. Though there appears to be quite a large number of people on picket, there are also many who make the trip to see what happens.

Throwing Rocks Dangerous and Cowardly Practice

Innocent and Guilty Liable to Suffer. Police Keep Cool Under Severe Provocation

Men calling others "scabs" and "yellow", have caused a few fights. Strikers apply these terms somewhat freely, and it is the cause of bitter feeling. The daily "strafe" at Bellevue is a degrading sight, and women taking part makes it more lurid. They are "wild wimmin" indeed, and their behavior is worse than savages, requiring unlimited patience and good nature by the police in handling frantic people. Were it not for their cool-headedness there would be many more casualties. Throwing rocks is bound to result in further arrests, and strike-leaders should try to prevent it. It is dangerous—more so for those resorting to it than their intended victims. It was the cause of the fatal riot at Estevan, and many arrests. No matter what the points of the dispute may be, the citizens as a whole, strikers included, should be pleased to see the authority of law and order maintained.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dr. A. E. Shore, of Drs. Gunn, Hackney & Shore, Calgary, will be at the office of Dr. R. F. Stewart, Blairmore, on Wednesday afternoon, May 18th.

Anyone wishing to consult him with regard to eye, ear, nose or throat, please make appointment with Dr. Stewart.

Four Strikers Arrested Bellevue This Morning

Mobs Grapple With Police to Try and Prevent Arrests. Two Women Are Jailed

As trucks arrived at Bellevue mine head under escort, they were met by a wildly howling mob of strikers, men and women, who attempted to block the passage of the trucks. It was in these melees that arrests were made, while the crowd was in an angry mood. Two police would seize a man, and others would form a cordon around them by this means edging their way through a hostile crowd who spared no attempt to wrest the prisoners from their captors. The women were the most difficult to handle, as they were shrieking hysterically, and determined efforts were made by men and women to take them from the police.

But they were hustled into the patrol wagon and very quickly speeded to the jail in Blairmore.

Three miners arrived on foot and were immediately assailed by a howling mob with cries of "scab". A dozen or more police immediately surrounded the workers, and they were hustled through the hostile crowd, the infuriated yells of the strikers giving vent to their feelings.

One worker is reported to have tried to get through the pickets alone, and was badly mauled and returned under police protection. The crowd was in an ugly mood, women sympathisers being hysterical and frantic in their behavior.

The arrests this morning were Alec Redzko and Nick Ukiervich, both reported of Coleman, and Mrs. Annie Polski and Mrs. Stelovich, of other Pass towns. Yesterday Gaston Bazille, organizer of the youths' section of the Workers' Unity League, was arrested by the R. C. M. P.

The police, mounted and on foot and plain clothesmen, are placed at strategic points, and carrying batons which are used if occasion requires.

Outside Influence

Struggle may last. Experience in labor troubles, strikes and lock outs during the past century has proved that acute disputes can only be settled by a willingness to cooperate. If the Crows Nest miners were freed of outside influence, the probability is that the strike would come to a close in a very short time.

The Glace Bay, (N.S.) Gazette pertinently asks editorially:

"What are the antecedents, affiliations and connections, whether foreign or domestic, of this Canadian union which our miners are invited to adopt? They had better find out before definitely committing themselves."

Two Special Services on Sunday

Mother's Day will be observed in two interesting and helpful services next Sunday at St. Paul's United church. At the morning service Miss Peggy Cole will bring the Mother's Day message and will be assisted by the junior choir. Mrs. Dave Currie of Bellevue, will sing a sacred solo.

In the evening there will be music in keeping with the occasion and the Mother's Day message will be preached by the minister.

Mrs. Clifford and daughter Hilda visited in Lethbridge last Saturday.

Harry Gardner of Edmonton was a visitor this week.
